Dear Reader:

We are not making this offer to just any name on a list of prospects.

You were selected because, if the list from which we got your name is a good barometer, you are the kind of reader for whom Newsweek is written. Busy. Involved. Whether it's political or economic news, the arts, science, medicine or religion, you want reporting that is intelligent, complete, and clear.

Newsweek gives you all that. And now we'd like to give you more. Because you are the kind of reader we want at Newsweek, we'd like to offer you a full year's subscription for our basic rate of just 62½¢ an issue. That's over 58% off the $1.50 cover price.

But to show that we really want you on our subscription file, we'll do more. Mail the order card today, and we'll send you the handy credit-card size calculator pictured at the left...absolutely free with your paid subscription. In your wallet, pocket, or purse, it's the perfect solution to all your mathematical needs while you're on the go.

We offer you all this because, frankly, we want to make it as tempting as possible for you to try Newsweek. Sure, we can tell you we've got the finest newsweekly anywhere, but we'd rather you had the opportunity to see for yourself. Soon. Now, in fact.

Because now is when you can really use Newsweek. Now when constant, surprising change is the rule rather than the exception...when it's hard to tell the heroes from the villains on the world stage...when understanding the ins and outs of politics here at home is a full time job...when the most subtle diplomatic nuance can lead to events you couldn't even dream of ...you need the clarity that only Newsweek brings you each week.

And with the news, you'll also enjoy our many popular departments. The most controversial and electrifying commentary. The most insightful profiles of people who are making their mark on the world today. The latest excitement from the worlds of science, medicine, sports, entertainment and the arts, business, economics. The dramatic evolution of new lifestyles, and what the trends of today mean for tomorrow.

If you're convinced, the free credit card calculator and the savings of over 58% at our low base price are yours for the asking. Simply check the enclosed order card and mail it today with your check or credit card authorization. It's a great deal...for a very special person.

Sincerely,

Joseph A. Acerno
Vice President, Circulation

P.S. Don't delay! Mail your order card now while it's in your hand. You'll be receiving your first copy of Newsweek within three weeks and your Newsweek calculator will arrive by U.S. mail 4 to 6 weeks after payment. Look forward to enjoying them.

RATES GOING UP

As of the September 7, 1981 issue Newsweek's cover price has gone up to $1.50. The subscription price will be increased soon. The best way to protect yourself against these price increases is to subscribe now ... for the longest possible term.

About your gift calculator

(What you have to gain.)

- Here's the convenience of a calculator—without the inconvenience of carrying a larger, standard pocket-size model.
- Because it's about as small and thin as a credit card, you can carry your gift calculator anywhere . . . and use it in stores, restaurants, at the bank, while traveling, etc.
- Even if you paid for it, the handy credit-card calculator would pay for itself many times over, but it's yours free with your paid subscription to Newsweek.

About our Newsweek offer

(What do you have to lose?)

At 50% off the cover price, our low basic rate—$32.50 for a full year just can't be beat. At only 62½¢ a week, Newsweek will quickly become an important part of your reading pleasure. Week after week, you'll enjoy a refreshing, total perspective of domestic and foreign news, culture, entertainment, science, medicine, religion . . . all that's happening in the world today!
